Living Examples

Forasmuch as ye are manifestly declared to be the epistle of Christ ministered by us. Written not with ink, but the Spirit of the living God; not in tables of stone, but in fleshy tables of the heart. 2 Cor. 3:3.

We are epistles whether or not we want to be. People read our actions daily and compare them with the profession we make about being Christians. How often we have heard the statement: "I don't have to tell people about Christ. If I just live as a Christian should, they will know that I am a Christian." Quite often people who say such things take no part in church activities. How-or whether-their neighbors know they are Christians, I cannot tell. If we are Christ's, if He is dear to our hearts. We will talk about Him, about His love, about His coming. God's epistles are not necessarily written in ink, but they are written by the Spirit of the living God. That Spirit was written into the heart of David Livingstone, He said: "I am willing to go anywhere for God, provided it be forward." Livingstone became a living epistle for Christ in Africa and to the world. On one ocasion he planned to blaze a trail from a certain place in Africa to the coast. It had never been done before. The journey would be filled with danger from disease, wild animals., hostile tribes. He asked a tribal chief to give him some men to go with him. The chief said he would on one condition that Livingstone personally would bring them back. To this Livingstone agreed. After months of hardship and trial the party reached the coast. Livingstone was sick and emaciated. A British ship happened to be in port. Livingstone had not seen his family for two or three years. The ship's captain offered him free passage home much as Livingstone would have liked to accept the offer, he refused, with the statement: "I must go back, I promised the chief I would personally bring his young men back to him." Livingstone plunged back into the jungle on the long track to the village. He was a living epistle. People of God, what kind of epistles are we? Do people see Christ in us? Do we speak for Him at every opportunity? The day may soon come when there will be no more opportunity. No more communications service for our Saviour - May we serve Him whenever, and wherever, we are.
